At the jeweller’s

Bart stopped in front of small window. There were only a few things in the window, a tray of opals, some watch chains and watches and half a dozen rings. He went in, and the jeweller looked up from his work.

“Well?” His voice was tired, but he looked friendly.

“I want to see a ring.”

“What sort of ring?”

-“A diamond ring.”

The jeweller stretched into the small window and picked up a small tray on which rested a pad containing six rings. Bart looked at them feeling foolish and helpless.

“I presume it is for a young lady?”

“That’s right.”

“ Oh well, we’re only young once. Perhaps your young lady would like to come in and try some of these on for herself.”

“She can’t. She doesn’t even know I’m taking her this. She is in a hospital.”

“I see. Then we must see she gets something specially nice.”

He opened a drawer under the counter and brought out three rings in a small box. “This one.” He held it up for Bart to see. “It’s marked thirty-five pounds. You can take a look at the ticket yourself. It’s quite a nice stone, and a nice setting. It’s a nice little ring. Good taste. You can have it for thirty pounds.”

Bart picked it up dubiously. The single stone flashed brightly under the light. He supposed it was in good taste, but it looked too little for thirty pounds.

“I’ll take it.”

“If it doesn’t fit or if she doesn’t like it bring it back and we’ll think about getting something to replace it.”

“Thanks,” Bart said and, pocketing the ring, went out into the street.

-I don't know. What colours have you got?

-We have got all colours. What do you think of blue?

-Blue is ok. Have you got it medium size?

-Yes, here you are.

-May I try it on?

-Of course, you may. The changing room is there. Does it fit?

-Well, it is a little small. Have you got a bigger one?

-Only in red. Would you like to try it on?

-Yes , thank you. ... It fits perfectly.

-Yes, and it suits you well.

-How much is it?

-It's 25 Euros.

-I take it. Can I pay by card or in cash only?

-You can pay in cash and by card , too.

-Here is my card.

-Thank you. Please, sign here. Good bye. Thanks for shopping here.

-Thank you, good bye.
